

About New Westminster

New Westminster is the oldest city in western Canada and the first capital of the colony of British Columbia.

The site for the city was chosen by the Royal Engineers largely for its strategic location on the Fraser River when they arrived from England in 1859.

The city's name was chosen by Queen Victoria herself. And because of this the city and its residents are entitled to refer to New Westminster as the Royal City.

